Library To Close At 10:30

by ROBERT PRINSKY

The Redpath Library will remain open until 10:30 weeknights beginning this Monday, March 6.

In a step similar to that taken last year, the Undergraduate Library only will be open for study, and no books will be issued from any of the desks after the regular closing time of 9:45 pm.

Although the UL was open until 11 last year, attendance figures taken at that time showed that most people left by 10:30. Richard Pennington, University Librarian, said that this experimental opening is designed to make maximum effectiveness of the library.

He said that if many people take advantage of the opening, it is possible that the closing time could be extended a little later. However, he completely discounted the possibility of a Sunday opening.

SUNDAY

He called it a "complex question with economic, religious, and social problems." He also stated that no members of the staff were willing to work on Sunday.

He emphasized the 8 hour work day that his staff has, and said that any extension of hours means a complete reorganization of shifts, and a major extension would call for more staff members. This would be difficult under the present financial arrangements, and there is no extra, qualified personnel available.

One advantage to weekend closing is that reserve books can be taken out for a longer time than ordinarily possible. Many students depend on this for the longer books which cannot be read in the regular period.

It was also mentioned casually by some Library staffers that if students worked harder during the week, they would not need to work on Sunday.

LIBRARY COMMITTEE

Stan Messer, Chairman of the SEC Library Committee, said that the extension of library hours is largely due to the effects of his committee which comprises of himself, Oded Frenkel, Eddie Aroff, and Rudy Javosky.

The committee met with Pennington several times and discussed several points which were precipitated this year.

Next year, a new reserve lending system will be inaugurated. All those wanting a certain book will sign a list which will be arranged in two hour intervals, and they can pick up the book in order. If a student does not report within 10 minutes of his appointed time, the book goes to the next on the list.

A Library lecture is also contemplated, to be given to freshmen, probably as part of their English course. This would familiarize them with the system.

SMOKING ROOM

As to a smoking room, Messer said that the Library feels there should be one, but regrets that it does not have the space. There are plans for an annex to the present building, and a smoking room is included.

Pennington feels the meetings with the SEC are worthwhile, and they will be established on a regular basis next year.

President Defends 65% Minimum

Your vote is being requested tomorrow not only with regard to the Students' Society elections, but also concerning the Referendum on the 65 p.c. minimum requirement. I have no hesitation in urging each and every member of the Students' Society to vote in favour of this Referendum.

The 65 p.c. minimum, which can be circumvented by a letter from the Dean, is designed to replace an existing rule on the books of Senate which is far more restrictive as far as student activities are concerned. At present the Senate rule states that any student who is carrying a course or repeating his year is prevented from participating in any capacity whatsoever, in any Student Society activity. Because we think that students can judge their time requirements for themselves, we would like to see this kind of restriction removed.

However there are certain positions in the Students' Society which require an unbelievably great expenditure of time and effort, and which are very much in the public eye. Academic failures in these positions are very poor publicity for the Students' Society and may act to discourage conscientious students from taking on these positions. The Students' Executive Council therefore felt that some flexible requirement of this sort, applied only to certain positions, was far better than a blanket minimum for all student activities, as now exists.

As to the idea that students are being judged on marks earned two years before they occupy their positions, may I point out that this strange situation exists only with regard to some of the activities in the suggested list, and that furthermore, improvement in the time since their last set of marks could be recognized in a letter from the Dean.

I specially hope that this Referendum will receive the two-thirds majority necessary for its passage, considering the fact that it has been on the books since last October, and opposition to it at this late date could conceivably cause chaos in tomorrow's important elections.

Stuart L. Smith,
President,
Students' Society.

Talbot-Papineau Semi-finals Ended; Four Finalists Selected From Field

by ELIZABETH DUQUET

Irwin Cotler, Philip DeZwirek, Gordon Echenberg and Mortimer Zuckerman talked their way into the finals of the Talbot-Papineau Cup competition yesterday.

The cup is the highest award which the debating Union offers in the field of public speaking.

Irwin Cotler spoke on the Theory of the Classless Society, explaining that it is a prominent sociological concept in our day. "If you wish to speak about theory you must go back to Marxism — the roots of this theory."

Cotler concluded by saying "You can only contend that the classless society is superior by comparing it with certain objectives or absolute moral principles. But Marxism denies any absolute or moral principles for it is a relative moral theory."

Phillip De Zwirek also chose to speak about the classless society. In an attempt to prove false the presumptions of a classless society he traced the evolution of society.

"The underlying thought throughout this process of evolution is the contention that the mass of mankind has been born with saddles on their backs and favored, bootied and spurred, ready to ride them legitimately by the grace of God."

Gordon Echenberg talked on "A Case For Birth Control". He said that at the present, production is unable to keep up with population growth. The issue is basically a question of morals. It is a greater good to have four million people living than eight million people merely existing.

Echenberg outlined three steps which must be taken in order to effectively introduce a programme of birth control: educate the people, overcome customs and tradition, the religious aspect.

Mortimer Zuckerman spoke on the Theory of A Classless Society. "Both the Soviet Union and the United States have laid claim to this fact in their propaganda. I maintain that the theory of the classless society is that no man should have a better or worse start than anyone else."

Zuckerman defined classlessness as a theory of mobility. This movement is inhibited by the fact that there are certain groups which do not have this power of mobility due to racial and religious prejudice.

The Morning After

Readers noticing many mistakes in the special issue yesterday can see the reason in the above glimpse of the Daily office. The high winds of the storm penetrated our frail walls and blew sheets of copy all over the floor.

Letters to the Editor

African Challenges Critic To Debate

Sir,
In reading the reply in your Feb. 27th, issue to my letter of Feb. 23rd. — also a reply — I was rather impressed by the grand tour de force of the writer's so-called "facts" deduced in a vain attempt to white-wash Belgian criminal past in the Congo, than by his avowed commitment to truth. I was chided for not producing references to support my knowledge or "ignorance" of "Belgian or Congolese affairs", the logic being that such references would ipso facto validate any statement. If I were to refer to article 17 of the constitution of the U.S.S.R., (1936) for example, which states "The right freely to secede from the U.S.S.R. is reserved to every Republic", this would, according to the writer, establish the truth of political reality in the Soviet Union! How utterly absurd!

Just as I am willing to look at any Belgian source of information on the Congo, so have I the intelligence to compare the information with what really is the situation in the Congo. I realise the latter is a gift not free to come by. I notice the writer of yesterday's letter excels in the former which he employed with the aim of covering his allegations and distortions with a smokescreen of beautiful truthfulness. Internal evidence, however, reveals that the "few facts" failed to drive home the truth. Hence the writer's pious cry "The Truth Will Out!". I trust he will out also! In that connection, I take this opportunity to challenge him to a public debate on the Belgian role in the Congo for the benefit of people who are in doubt about Belgian barbarism there.

G. K. Agama

Anonymous Scribe Writes Again

Sir,

I thank you for publishing my letter yesterday, but unfortunately three key paragraphs were left out and I'd like them published. These are:

"To put it bluntly he not only missed the point of my last letter, but his is full of slanderous statements & gross distortions of a few facts. He shows his ignorance of the subject to such an extent that one wonders if he deliberately wished to mislead Daily readers.

With reference to Belgium's recent strikes, I am pleased to be able to remind Mr. Agama of his own statement that parallelism in time does not suggest cause and effect". Any student of Belgian affairs will understand that these strikes had nothing to do with the Congo & were a reflection of government policy in their presenting the usual 'extraordinary budget' together with the 'ordinary budget'.... something which should have been done ten years ago.

"On receiving independence the Congo also received mining shares valued at $650 million, formerly held by the Colonial Administration. Belgium revenue from Congolese investment represented only a maximum of 5½ of Belgium's G.N.P. & was received solely by individuals who owned shares, properties, etc. If this revenue were lost the Belgian State would lose only a fraction of that 5% as represented by taxes on dividends & salaries. (see study made by l'Université Libre de Bruxelles, 1960, & Belgian Trade Review, Vol. IV, No. 9, New York, 1960)".

The truth will out!

Robert N. Newman

Robin Mystery Uncovered; Warblers Sing Of Concert

Listen my children and you shall hear, of the most important scoop of the year.

In an exclusive interview with the Daily, a little bird told us the whole story of the Robin mystery. Ace editors Judi Zeisler and Ann Wilson traced the robin to Lawrence Healey, publicity chairman (naturally) for "Springsong '61".

This is the sixteenth annual spring concert of the Choral Society, and will be held this year in the Currie Gym on Saturday March 18.

The robin in question is, of course, that little bird which has been reposing in the pages of the Daily for the past two weeks with a little sign leaving absolutely no doubt as to what species he was.

The ornithological specimen was the subject of much campus chatter "Who's he?" and "What does he think he's doing here in this crazy weather?"

There was even talk of dressing up the poor little fella to protect him from suffering an untimely death from drowning in the onslaught of precipitation which has frequented the Montreal area of late.

MULTIPLICATION

Whatever they did, they encouraged the boy and he started to multiply at super-rabbit rates. First appearing in the Daily in living black and white, he graduated to lapels of hundreds of students in glorious technicolour. Now he's even on posters.

Campus wheels theorized everything from the formation of a new political party to a new faculty of robinology. Some gruesome character suggested that the robin was destined to replace the hockey as our national dish.

MASS PROGRAM

One keen sociology student said that it was part of a mass public education programme designed to educate Montreal drivers who are prone to knocking down anything that walks, swims, or flies.

Two freshettes were overheard trying to decide if it was running for Students' Society President or Carnival Queen. A last minute report had it that it was an American import being groomed by Perry Moss to replace our Sam at quarterback.

The weekend arrived with lots of controversy but no definite clues. Meanwhile several campus organizations began serious investigations into the background of this campus enigma.

The political science club studied the possibility that a 1984 "Big Brother is watching you" state was being imposed on McGill. The psychology club searched for a fundamental Robinmania which forced people to associate themselves with this free creature of nature.

Nevertheless, the intrepid Daily reporters, unhindered by political prejudices, broke the case over the weekend. Working on an inside tip, they raided the Choral Society storeroom and found hundreds of poor robins mercilessly stabbed with hatpins.

Faced with this convincing evidence, Healey admitted that he had concocted the stunt for publicity for Springsong.

"It was a natural", he chirped, "both the robin and Springsong '61 are the first signs of spring, so why not put them together?"

He hastened to remind the staffers that the concert was rapidly drawing near, and to buy their tickets early so as to get a good perch.

McGill Debaters Second At RIT

Frank Toker and Bob Vineberg, two McGill debaters, placed second at the Rochester Institute of Technology International Tournament during the weekend.

With a total of 28 teams entered from major universities in the Great Lakes region, the two freshmen debaters amassed 298 points, just four points behind the winning team Ithaca College, New York. They upheld the negative of the subject Resolved: That his House affirms the recent U.N. proposal for immediate steps toward complete independence for trust and non-self-governing territories.

ELIMINATION

The Tournament, now in its fourth year, is distinguished by the inclusion of cross-examination before the final summaries, and by the unusual method of elimination. Since winners were always matched against other winners, McGill and Ithaca faced each other after each had defeated 3 other teams.

The final debate, attended by an audience, was dropped by 2 points to Ithaca. Stan Bergosh opened the affirmative case by defending man's right to freedom and the worth of the U.N. proposal. Toker then charged, as first negative speaker, that freedom could not be granted until the colonies were prepared for it. In an infrequently-used tactic, he submitted a written query to the opposition, probing one of the many vague generalities of the proposal.

Harvey Snyder took up this challenge by outlining a supposed plan to implement the resolution. Bob Vineberg in turn, accused the affirmative of violating debating procedure by upholding a resolution other than the U.N.'s. He revealed the unique negative counterproposal, the only such plan offered in the tournament. It proposed liberating colonies only when deemed ready by the Security Council, to remedy the problems previously cited.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

Frank Toker opened the cross-examination for the negative by interrogating Snyder with a series of questions leading from the seemingly-innocuous to the pointed and revealing. The affirmative unwillingly admitted that the resolution would liberate colonies who might succumb to Communism, racial strife, and economic collapse.

Bergosh announced that the negative would not contest the counterplan, but tried to find similarities in both methods. Vineberg, in a miniature filibuster, meticulously delineated the contrasts between the two proposals, thus exhausting the remaining time.

WAA Open Meeting Is Climax Of Activities

by YVETTE HOCH
Associate Women's Sports Ed.

After a busy and successful year, the Women's Athletic Association will climax its activities with the second annual open Meeting to be held Thursday, March 9.

The meeting is scheduled immediately before the WAA Awards Banquet as it was felt by the different councils that this important event would be a greater success if held in conjunction with the banquet.

OPENINGS FOR ELECTIONS

One of the chief purposes of meeting is to elect officers for several very significant positions on the WAA. Open for fulfillment will be the posts of secretary and treasurer, as well as golf and tennis presidents. It is most vital that the right people be chosen for these responsible jobs, and only with a good representation of the women students at large can this be achieved. Proposed amendments in the WAA's constitution will also be voted upon, and again, this requires a quorum.

The two Open Meetings held by the association each year, are the only opportunities for McGill women to see exactly how an organization as large as the WAA is run and regulated. Highlights of the year in review will be given by the presidents of the various sports clubs and the new President will be introduced at this time.

Redmen Hoopsters Vie For City Title Tonight

by BOB GOLDSCHLEGER

Tonight at 8:15 the Redmen Basketball squad places their championship hopes for the City title on the line as they take on Sir George Williams University at Mont Saint Louis Gymnasium, Sherbrooke St. E.

This is the fourth game in series with the Georgians which has seen McGill win one and lose two. If the Redmen are victorious tonight, the series moves into its fifth and final game which will decide the city intercollegiate basketball champion. If they lose, McGill is through for the season.

Thus far this year, there has been little to choose between the two squads. The Redmen won the first game by 1 point and the Georgians have come out on top in the last two by 15 and 8 points respectively.

Two weeks ago, McGill had a 6 point lead going into the final 5 minutes, but came apart at the seams when their ace rebounder Ian Montieth was forced out of the game with a badly twisted ankle.

In addition to this, the Redmen have played the better part of the season without the services of John Girvin, a man who could have aided the team greatly. However, despite the injuries, our boys have showed a tremendous amount of desire and have put together the best basketball record earned at McGill in the last decade. In the city league, they hold a record of 8 wins and 2 losses.

It is hoped that both Girvin and Montieth will be in uniform tonight but the prospects aren't very favourable. If neither can play it is likely that either Gary Ulrich of Tom Richards will move into the pivot post, and Marty Wright will see action at guard.

Gary has had his best season at McGill and is currently reputed to be the scoring leader in the city league. Ulrich has been consistent all along and rarely comes out of a game with less than 15 points. With George Michowsky providing the accurate outside shooting, the Georgians will have their hands full in containing the potent McGill offensive which poured in 90 points against the U of M Carabins last week.

What was significant in that game was that five McGill players hit for more than 12 points. Thus if one man has an off-night, there should be someone to take his place as far as point-scoring is concerned.

On Friday and Saturday, the McGill Intercollegiate Team invaded Toronto to battle teams from the hometown, Western, and Queens. At the outcome, Queen's had walked off with the laurels in addition to the Bronze Baby, emblematic of intercollegiate basketball supremacy. Toronto was the runnerup, while Western, and McGill tied for third.

Although McGill did not fare too well, they were the only team to beat Toronto — a feat not too easily accomplished. In the three games of the Round Robin Tournament in which they competed, The Red and White emerged with a 1-2 record.

In the first match, McGill turned Toronto aside by a 35-32 count. It was a well-matched event that saw basket for basket being exchanged. The Red and White, however, had that extra little something that accounted for their being on the better side of the score.

In the match, Toronto held a slim 11-8 lead at the end of the first quarter. This was increased to 20-16 at the half time whistle. However the McGill team was totally rejuvenated when in the next quarter, the defensive squad proved an impenetrable line, as they held Toronto to a 27-27 score at the end of this canto. By the closing whistle, great team spirit, added to the pinpoint shooting of Doty Pryde who counted for 15 points, enabled McGill to claim the victory.

Unfortunately, the Red and White did not fare as well when pitted against Queens and Western. They dropped a close 30-27 decision to Queens while in the Western match, they came out on the wrong side of a 49-40 count. Despite the latter loss, however, the bright spot in the game was Ann Hewett - who erupted for a fantastic 27 point barrage.

Squaw Pucksters Beat Georgians By 3-0 Shutout

The McGill Women's Intercollegiate Hockey team blanked Sir George 3-0 in a hotly contested game on Friday at the McGill Winter Stadium.

The Squaws, one of the strongest varsity teams over fielded, scored once in every period to registered the victory over the Georgians. This marked the first time the two teams had ever met in a hockey game.

Centre Linda L'Aventure was the main factor in the win as she accounted for two goals and one assist. Louise Forbes notched her third tally for the Squaws while defenceman Bran Duder and Helen Softley both came up with fine performances on the blue line. Although goalie Barb Rowat received fine protection from her mates, she made several difficult saves in registering her first shutout of the season.

The next encounter for the Red and White skaters is on Friday when they meet St. Mary's Hospital at the McGill Winter Stadium.
